

VETS 4 SWEDEN 2024

Specialized Vet in cows & bulls

Animal health veterinarian, Växa Sverige

"I work at Växa because I want to work with cows and farmers. There is an incredible amount of knowledge here and therefore Växa is a perfect place for me who wants to develop in terms of preventive animal health work. In addition, I enjoy working with an employer who allows a lot of my own planning and where I don't have to work weekends and evenings".

The above is an answer from one of our animal health veterinarians to the question "Why do you work at Växa?"

About the position:

As an animal health veterinarian at Växa, you work strategically and preventively with herd health management services for dairy and beef cattle in Sweden. You mainly do scheduled visits that involves working with e.g. reproductive examinations, udder health and different types of control programs. Växa provide a lot of selected herd performance records that help our veterinarians with decisions and actions related to specific herd management issues. Many of our veterinarians also work with the ViLA-program that give the farmers opportunity to treat some diseases on their own if they work together with the veterinarian and have scheduled visits regarding preventive herd health.

You are based on one of our numerous operating sites countrywide and since we provide a wide range of advisory services for farmers you will be a part of a team of dedicated people with a diverse range of experiences in different areas. We encourage collaboration within the company, and you will have a large number of knowledgeable and experienced colleagues only a call away.

Further education and training are a natural part of the work, and we offer all our new employees a solid introduction.

Who are we looking for?

You have a veterinary degree from an EU/EEA country with good knowledge in English, basic knowledge in Swedish and you are motivated to learn Swedish on a communication level. Good communication skills are of great importance, and we value personal qualities such as the ability to create relationships and to collaborate, both with customers and colleagues. Driving license is a requirement.

We assume that you have a great interest in cows and preventive health care and that you want to contribute to develop the Swedish dairy and beef production in cooperation with both our customers and other advisors. It's highly important that you have a desire to deliver what customers need to achieve a sustainable food production.
